

GIRL STRUCK BY WAGON WINS SUIT

Jury Returns Verdict for $1,750 Damages Against Local Towel Supply

Verdict for $1,750 damages for personal injuries was returned by the jury in superior court Tuesday in the suit of Winnie Hiek, a minor, by her mother, Fannie Hiek, against the Linen Towel Supply company, owner of the Linen Towel Supply company. The suit, in which damages of $5,000 were asked, resulted subsequent to the injury of the 14-year-old girl when she was struck by a towel supply delivery wagon.

The petition states that the plaintiff had alighted from a street car at Third and Main street November 21, 1919, when she was struck by the wagon and permanently injured. In their answer the defendants alleged the girl was guilty of contributory negligence in attempting to cross the street without having taken precautions to ascertain whether the crossing was clear of vehicles.

They were held under $1,000 bond each. Mrs. Kennedy left her Dawson home, according to her husband, several months ago. He says she had visited with a sister in El Paso, where she met Brown. She returned to Dawson but remained only a short time.
